- 问答形式
- Basic questions, some are quite difficult
- Hometown
- Where is your hometown?
- Is that a big city or a small place?
- Do you like your hometown?
- Is there anything you dislike about it?
- Good vs Bad
- Where is your hometown?
- Bad: My hometown is in Harbin
- Good: My hometown is right here in Harbin. I've been living here for quite a few years...
- Difference?
- Idiomatic
- Being able to expand your answers
- How to become idiomatic
- Break in
- Take off
- Turn down
- Run over
- How to expand your answers?
- Rule 1: make a comparison

- Is that a big city or a small place?
- Good: I think Harbin is a big city with a population size of over 9 million...
- Better: Compared with some of the other cities I've been to, such as Beijing, Shenzhen, I think Harbin is rather kinda small. (transportation, job opportunities, shopping...)
- Let's take shopping for example
- Earlier this year, I went travelling to Beijing with my girlfriend. Obviously, whenever you travel with a girl, she's gonna take you shopping. So we went to a shopping mall, which isn't even one of the best or biggest in Beijing. But all the brands, all the products they had, it was so much better than any shopping mall in Harbin. Well, at least that's what she told me.

Is it a hat or a cat?

- The historical building that I want to talk about is the Chinese National Library. This library was built back in 1909, when it was still called “Jing Shi” library (京师图书馆).

- The Library covers approximately two hundred and eighty thousand square kilometers. It is separated into three sections, the Southern Section, the Northern Section and the Ancient Collection Section. There are about 38 million books in total, with 25 reading rooms and over 5000 seats, which makes it the biggest library in Asia and the third biggest library in the whole world.
- I could still remember last summer when I went there with my friends. It was a sunny day and very hot outside for sure. My friends didn't really want to go because they wanted to either stay at home and enjoy the air conditioning or go shopping. But I insisted on going because I had been looking forward to this for a while.
- It was very cool in the library. People were all very quiet. We walked around the library and the view of thousands of books stacking on top of each other was just unbelievable. I looked at my friends and they were all in shock as well.

- Being able to expand your answers
- Remember rule 1?
 - Are you a student or do you have a job?
 - What is your major? Do you like it?
 - Are you looking forward to working?

- Do you prefer studying in the morning or in the afternoon?
- Rule 2: Give examples
- Were you patient when you were young?
- Are you less or more patient when you are angry?
- How do you feel when other people are not patient?
- Were you patient when you were young?
- Like most boys are during their childhood, my patience was just about little to none. When I was about, 5 to 6 years old, my mother wanted me to develop art hobbies because I was, and I'm quoting her here, "married to basketball". So she bought a piano for me and hired a personal instructor to teach me three times a week. Well, long story short, my instructor left me after the second session. I can still remember the last thing she told me, and I'm quoting again, "Piano takes patience." I guess that's a pretty good indication of how impatient I was as a boy.
